That is the Amount of Damages the Jury Awarded Miss Mildred J. Woods.

Largest Damages Ever Awarded in Putnam Circuit Court.

On Tuesday afternoon a Putnam county jury brought into the Circuit Court the largest verdict for damages ever rendered in the county, and yet the verdict did not astonish those most conversant with the circumstances surrounding the case. The cause was entitled Mildred J. Woods vs. the C. C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co., for damages resulting from injuries received in an accident last summer. The plaintiff, accompanied by Mrs. Welch and Miss Van Buskirk, were driving across the track of said railroad, just southwest of the city limits, where the Portland Mills free gravel road crosses the railroad. A west bound freight train pushing a number of flat cars ahead of it, was approaching the crossing, and by reason of the cut through which the railroad passes these flat cars could not be seen from the highway. The ladies stopped their horse before starting across the tracks, saw the smoke of the approaching engine, and determined they had plenty of time to cross before it arrived. As the horse reached the crossing the flat cars also arrived, and in the twinkling of an eye the vehicle was demolished and the ladies were thrown into the ditch. All of them were more or less seriously injured, and the plaintiff in the case, Miss Woods, who was a beautiful, rosy cheeked, graceful young lady, received injuries from which it is thought she will never entirely recovered.

The trial of the cause began on Friday of last week. Messrs. Dye and Grooms were the attorneys for the railroad, and Col. C. C. Matson and Mathias & Hays conducted the case for the plaintiff. It was prosecuted and defended most ably, and Judge McGregor's instructions to the jury were logical, clear and fair.

On retiring the jury, on the first ballot, agreed that the railroad company was liable for damages, and the question as to the amount was not a question of great length of time. The lowest limit proposed was $5,000, and it was but faintly sustained, by far the greater number of jurors favoring a much larger figure. While considering the amount to be awarded the jury virtually agreed at one time to fix the damages at $16,000, but on further consideration they reduced the figures to $12,500, and so returned the verdict.

So far as we have heard public opinion expressed the decision of the jury meets with approval, the general expression being that no amount of pecuniary relief could undo the injury done, and that the verdict gives Miss Woods, should careful investment be made, an income sufficient to place her above want.

Putnam county has long been noted for its fine stock—cattle, horses, swine and sheep. In the matter of horses, however, there have been wonderful strides forward in the past few years, not only for speed, but also for draft and general purposes. This, coupled with many other reasons, favor the organization of a fair and trotting association.

The Stilesville correspondent of the Danville Gazette says: It has been known for a long time that the springs, south of town, on the farm of M. F. McHaffie, possessed medical qualities. Mr. McHaffie has determined to build a magnificent hotel and in conjunction a mile race course. The land and soil are the kind that is required to build a good race track, and there is one of the most beautiful building sites on the ground that can be found in Indiana.

Oratorical Excursion. The Vandalia Lne announces the annual excursion to Indianapolis on March 11, and promises students and others the best accommodations. #### DIDN'T KNOW IT WAS LOADED

Will Grooms Seriously Shot at Duluth.

On Sunday last a very serious accident happened to William, son of Mr. T. C. Grooms, of this city. William is employed as a hardware salesman in Duluth, Wisconsin. The particulars of the sad accident are as follows:

"I did not know it was loaded," said John Cameron after he had sent a 38-calibre ball almost clean through the breast of William J. Grooms yesterday noon. After returning from church the two young men were in their bed room at 526 West Fourth street, chatting happily together. Grooms was cutting an orange in two to divide with his chum and Cameron at this time went to the wash stand drawer and took out a revolver that both of them had been looking at the night before, and began to fumble it in his hands, when by some means he pulled the trigger sufficiently hard to discharge the pistol. The bullet struck young Grooms just to the left of the right breast, skirting the lungs and lodging just under the skin of the back. Remarkable to relate, young Grooms, with great presence of mind, told his companion to go for a doctor and then went into the parlor and told Mrs. Mulligan, his landlady, that he was shot, but not to be alarmed, as it "wasn't much and was an accident." He sat on a chair for a while and then got up and walked to a lounge and laid down. For a long time he bore up bravely and did not appear to suffer much. Dr. Ritchie said it was a case in a thousand of the kind that death did not result instantly.

Where the ball entered, an aperture large enough to insert the finger was made, and at the back the bullet can be felt by pressing the hand on the spot. The wound was carefully dressed, and the physicians left with hopes of the young man's recovery.

Cameron relates that on Saturday evening himself and Grooms were looking at the pistol and that he suggested that the chamber be taken out and that Grooms did take it and after wards must have replaced it. That when he was looking at the revolver he presumed it was empty. He said that he had the barrel resting in his left hand and his right was around

On Thursday night the faithful of the Republican fold hereabouts gathered at the Opera House to hear John K. Gowdy, of Louisville, speak. They heard him, and so could any one who happened to be within a square or two. His is not that small still voice of petting sweetness oft heard of neither is he gifted with that greatest of oratorical powers known as sticking to the truth. In fact Gowdy is chiefly noted, judged by his Thursday night effort, for most fully earning the prevaricator's crown.

Miss Ione Paxton gave a farewell reception to her many friends on Tuesday evening. Miss Paxton leaves shortly for Kentucky, where she goes to attend business college. Among those present were Misses Hattie Bivens, Lizzie Meikels, Edith Conklin, Hattie Browning, Edith and Hannah Arthur, Bertha Gibson and Sue Earhardt, and Messrs. Charlie Broadstreet, William Grogan, Leath Hirt, William Breeden, Otis Browning, Fred Jacobs, Phil Pruitt and Ed. Hunt. All report a pleasant time, and left wishing Miss Ione success. The evening will long be remembered as a pleasant one by those present.

The Pan Hellenic Reunion and Banquet, held in the parlors of the Palace Cafe, Thursday night, was up to the high mark always expected on these occasions. That portion of the evening devoted to speech making was more than usually happy, the bounteous spread enjoyed just before, doubtless adding spirit and vivacity to the thoughts and expressions of the modern prototypes of Demosthenes and Cicero who were cast for replies to the toasts offered. The music was sweet—could be thought else when furnished by the Senior Class, on the organ.

swooping down from the invisible Sierras, and possessing all it touched.
But it was only one long descent to Hickory Hill now, and she swept down securely on its wings. Half-past eight!
The lights of the settlement were just ahead of her, but so, too, were the two lamps of the waiting stage before the post office and hotel.

Haply the lounging crowd were gathered around the hotel, and she slipped into the post office from the rear unperceived. As she stepped behind the partition, its only occupant—a good-looking young fellow with a reddish mustache—turned towards her with a flush of delighted surprise. But it changed at the sight of the white, determined face that had never looked once towards him, but was fixed upon a large bag, whose yawning mouth was still open and propped up beside his desk.

"Where is the through money letter that came in that bag?" she said, quickly.

"What—do—you—mean?" he stammered, with a face that had suddenly grown whiter than her own.

"I mean that it's a decoy, checked at Heavy Tree Crossing, and that Mr.
Home, of San Francisco, is now waiting at my office for to know if you have taken it."

The laugh and lie that he had at first tried to summon to mouth and lips never reached them. For, under the spell of her rigid, truthful face, he turned almost mechanically to his desk and took out a package.

"Good God! You've opened it already!" she cried, pointing to the broken seal.

The expression on her face, more than anything she had said, convinced him that she knew all. He stammered under the new alarm that her despairing tone suggested: "Yes—I was owing some bills—the collector was waiting here for the money, and I took something from the packet. But I was go-

"WHERE IS THE THROUGH MONEY LETTER?"

ing to make it up by next mail—I swear it."

"How much have you taken?"
"Only a trifle, I—"
"How much?"
"A hundred dollars."

She dragged the money she had brought from Laurel Run from her pocket, and, counting out the sum, replaced it in the open package. He ran quickly to get the sealing wax, but she motioned him away as she dropped the package back into the mail bag.

"No; as long as the money is found in the bag the package may have been broken accidentally. Now burst open one or two of those other packages a little." So she took out a packet of letters and bruised their official wrappings under her little foot until the tape fastenings were loosened. "Now give me something heavy." She caught up a brass two-pound weight, and in the same feverish but collected haste wrapped it in paper, sealed it, stamped it, and, addressing it in a large printed hand to herself at Laurel Hill, dropped it in the bag. Then she closed it and locked it; he would have assisted her, but she again waved him away. "Send for the express man, and keep yourself out of the way for a moment," she said, curtly.

An attitude of weak admiration and foolish passion had taken the place of his former tremulous fear. He obeyed excitedly, but without a word. Mrs.
Baker wiped her moist forehead and parched lips, and shook out her skirt.
Well might the young expressman start at the unexpected revelation of those sparkling eyes and that demurely smiling mouth at the little window.
"Mrs. Baker!"

She put her finger quickly to her lips, and threw a world of unutterable and enigmatical meaning into her mischievous face.

"There's a big San Francisco swell taken' my place at Laurel to-night, Charley."

"Yes, ma'am."
"And it's a pity that the omnibus way bag happened to get such a shaking up and banging round already, coming here."

"Eh?"
"I say," continued Mrs. Baker, with great gravity and dancing eyes, "that it would be just awful if that fearful city clerk found things kinder mixed up inside when he comes to open it. I wouldn't give him trouble for the world, Charley!"

"No, ma'am, it ain't like you."
"So you'll be particularly careful on my account."

"Mrs. Baker," said Charley, with infinite gravity, "if that bag should tumble off a dozen times between this and Laurel Hill, I'll hop down and pick it up myself."

"Thank you! shake!"
They shook hands gravely across the window ledge.

"And you ain't goin' down with us, Mrs. Baker?"
"Of course not; it wouldn't do—for I ain't here—don't you see?"
"Of course!"

"I'm sure I don't know what you're talking about," said Mrs. Baker, with a lofty air of dignity, but a somewhat debasing color. "I don't see why I should know anything about it, or why he should go away at all."

"Well," said Mr. Home, laying his hand gently on the widow's shoulder, "well, you see, it might have occurred to his friends that the coins were marked! That is, no doubt, the reason why he would take their good advice and go. But, as I said before, Mrs. Baker, you're all right whatever happens; the government will stand by you!"

[THE END.]
HOW CHEESE IS MADE.

Facts Which Are Not as Widely Known as They Should Be.

The first stage in the making of cheese is that by which the curd is separated from the whey, says Harper's Young People. This is done by heating the milk to a given temperature, varying according to the season, and afterward adding a certain proportion of rennet. When the cheese is to be colored the dyeing matter is put in before the rennet. In less than half an hour after the heat has been applied the coagulation has so far progressed that the curd, from which the whey has been drawn, is ready to be cut.

Almost the only instrument used in the making of cheese is the curd-knife, a curious-looking arrangement something like a double comb with long teeth. The immature cheese is both cut and stirred with this, the curd being separated into small bits, none of them being larger than an ordinary walnut. The stirring and heating must go on until the curd has reached a proper stage of what is called "digestion." It is then torn into narrow strips like ribbons, for the curd by this time is as firm in fiber as the breast of a roasted chicken and indeed looks like it. These strips are then fed into the salting mill, where they are thoroughly mixed with salt and made ready for the cheese press.

Enormous pressure is applied in this cheese press in order that all the whey that by any possibility remains may be squeezed out.

From the press the cheese is taken to drying room, a large, airy chamber, where it is left for days, months, or even years, according to the quality desired. It is frequently turned and much care is expended on it. All cheese must go through the same stages, the different varieties being made by certain combinations of cream, fresh and skimmed milk.

THE TRADE RATS OF ARIZONA.
How They Transfer Goods from One Place to Another.

A miner near the Senator recently had a rather singular experience with trade rats, known also as mountain rats. As the nights were cold the miner took his ore sack to replenish his rather hard bed. Having neglected to come to town for several weeks his supply of beans had given out and he had come down to a diet of straight bacon. Considerably out of humor he started in to pull his bed to pieces one morning and in removing the sacks was agreeably surprised to find three pounds of beans, with a little coffee mixed, which the trade rats had brought from the Senator and stored in his bed.

The rats, says the Prescott Courier, are native Americans and very different from their imported Norway cousins.
They are called trade rats because they generally leave some article in exchange for what they take away.

The miner states that he never killed a trade rat; that these rodents habitually steal from one cabin and carry their plunder into an adjoining one; that on one occasion he spilled a couple of quarts of corn on the floor of his cabin and the next morning found the rats had stored away every grain of it in a pair of saddle-bags hanging upon the wall.

He also states that the rats have thick caudal appendages about three inches in length, which they keep constantly throwing up and down, striking the floor with each downward movement with the regular measured stroke of a musical professor marking time. They carry off plugs of tobacco, tooth-brushes, combs and brushes, in fact anything which they can manage to move.

An Explanation of the Power—It Is Due to Mesmerism.

Kalm mentions having seen a rattlesnake "lying at the bottom of a tree on which a squirrel was seated, fixing its eyes on the little animal, which from that moment cannot move or escape, but begins a doleful outcry, comes toward the snake, runs a little bit away, comes nearer, and is finally swallowed."

But, as if to show that this result of bewilderment is not all to be put down to the eye alone, Dr. Andrew Smith says: "I have heard of cases in which antelopes and other quadrupeds have been so bewildered by the sudden appearance of crocodiles, by the grimaces and contortions they practiced, as to be unable to fly or move from the spot toward which the crocodiles were approaching to seize them."

This power is in the human animal often developed to a very great extent, and the part the eyeplays in fascinating a fellow creature by mesmerism—thus opening the way to almost infinite physical results and unveiling unknown depths of possibility—is decidedly great in proportion to the magnetic force of the system, or rather the mind, for which it acts.

He Shot His Stepdaughter.
RED BLUFF, Ark., Feb. 17.—Henry Black was whipping his wife when his stepdaughter interfered to protect her mother. Black turned upon the girl, and, drawing a revolver, shot her in the temple, death resulting almost instantly. Black was arrested.

Sisters Burned to Death.
WELFORD, S. C., Feb. 15.—Mrs.
Gregory, a widow, was making soap Friday, when her clothing caught fire.
Her sister went to her assistance, and both ladies were burned to death. Mrs.
Gregory leaves three children and her sister leaves six.

Property will not perish, but there will be

It is Not What We Say But what Hood's Sarsaparilla does, that makes it sell, and has given it such a firm and lasting hold upon the confidence of the people.
The voluntary statements of thousands of people prove beyond question that this preparation possesses wonderful medicinal power.

They are the best family cathartic.

It is no little sin to represent trifles as necessary on the one hand or fatal on the other to salvation.

A Little Girl's Experience in A Lighthouse.
Mr. and Mrs. Loren Trescott are keepers of the Gov. Lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich., and are blessed with a daughter, four years old. Last April she was taken down with measles, followed with a dreadful cough and turning into a fever. Doctors at home and at Detroit treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere "handful of bones."—Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery and after the use of two and a half bottles, was completely cured. They say Dr.
King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold, yet you may get a trial bottle free at Albert Allen's drug store.

The religion of a good many people is like the fire in flint—it needs to be struck out of them.

Is Life Worth Living depends on the liver. If suffering with indigestion, or troubled with malaria, that tired worn-out feeling, you will consider life worth very little. But when relieved of these by taking Simmons Liver Regulator you will count life a blessing and keep the Regulator on hand for any sudden attack of biliousness and sick headache. An active liver makes life a delight.
Don't forget the Regulator with the red Z.

The men who sneer at Christianity fail to recognize how largely they are indebted to the Gospel for all they have and are.

Strength and Health.
If you are not feeling strong and healthy, try Electric Bitters. If "la grippe" has left you weak and weary, use Electric Bitters.
This remedy acts directly on liver, stomach and kidneys, gently aiding those organs to perform their functions. If you are afflicted with sick headache, you will find speedy and permanent relief by taking Electric Bitters.
One trial will convince you that this is the remedy you need. Large bottles only 50c. at Allen's drug store.

Judge Woods, as Talked By JAMES G. BLAINE. DANIEL W. VOORHEES.
BENJAMIN HARRISON. DAVID TURPINE.
Says Jim:

How can it be? How can it be?
I looked at Ben—Ben looked at me.
I thought of all that Ben had borne—Of Chilian wars and tax reform.
Tell me again what Judge Woods said.
And listening lowly bent my head.
Says Ben:
"Dear Ben—You know in '88, When defeat in office seemed your fate, How one in time of danger strived, And used the scheme of 'blocks-of-five,'
With plenty of 'boodle' at his command;
You know has placed you where you stand.
But then when all that struggle's o'er,
And free trade yells were heard no more,
There was a shout, 'Ah dreadful woe!
Poor Dudley to the pen must go.
That grand jury was on his track,
And had I not my charge taken back;
He would be behind the prison wall And then he would blow on you and all.
The rest who men's rights destroy,
Which would show up worse than Simeon Coy, Now when I took my first charge back, Revealed to all I was a quack, But what I want and you must give,
Is office on which I can live.
I hear of vacancies you'll fill;
Just think of me, your old friend Bill, Who'll never from his party budge, And think he is a first-class Judge.
Just think of me I say dear Ben,
As saving Dudley from the pen.
I know that this your heart will touch You will not say it is too much.
Others may come with their 'cants' and 'colds,' But I did do it, truly yours, Bill Woods."

Says Jim:
Ben that shows your record pretty tough,
And in my mind 'tis quite enough To heap on you such great disgrace That you would almost lose your place.
And so I say to keep him still;
On the Appellate bench put our dear Bill.
Says Ben:
That is exactly what should be done;
But then those Democrats I'll have to shun, For they will try their very best To never let my record rest.
But as for that I will not bother, For I would as soon the one way as another.
He who never tries never knows,
And I'll try once, so now here goes.
To the Senate:
Gentlemen of note and fame, Hear you this illustrious name, To be confirmed by one and all No one should object at all To mete justice to his fellow-men.
'Tis William A. Woods I recommend.
Says Dan:
Come Dave I see we have to fight If every thing here goes off right.
I did not think 'twould come to pass But Ben is down to it at last,
And now I say and say it sure;
That Appellate bench must be kept pure.
Let's see how Judge Woods did behave With Dudley. Are you with me Dave?
Says Dave:
Now Dan I think you're in the right,
And so I'll join you in the fight.
We'll show up Woods so very black That Ben will sure his name take back.
Some men we'll bring from our great state Who know his actions here of late.
We'll see how just he's been to men, In saving Dudley from the pen.
If the Senate does this name confirm,
I'll go to work and try to learn The motive that has made them vote, I know most 'tis the party yoke.
For when the time comes they'll vote yea, But mine will be Dave Turpin—nay.

People of Indiana great,
What do you think will be his fate?
He's now in the committee's hand And facts are not at my command.
But when the facts come that I need To it all I'll then proceed.
Giving Dan and Dave our wishes best Some future time I'll tell the rest.

Cuban Confidences.
(Special Correspondence of the Star-Press.) HAVANA, CUBA, February 10, 1892.
Editor STAR-PRESS: I hail and greet you from this gem of the American seas. Sitting at an open window with the warm breeze coming in laden with all the perfume of a tropical vegetation, and surrounded with the strangeness of a foreign land I write these lines for friends in a Hoosier land now white with snows of winter. In the brief space of a newspaper letter it would be impossible to give the many impressions of a country so oriental in its characteristics. Indeed, it is impossible to express how essentially everything differs in this sunny island from our own country.
The language, the people, the climate, the manners and customs, the architecture, the foliage, the flowers, all offer broad contrasts to what I have left behind.

To tell the history of Cuba in the briefest way would be to repeat the long list of wrongs that has been heaped upon this fair island ever since the Spaniards landed upon her shores. These are familiar to all and form the darkest page in Spanish history; nor will the record be complete till Cuba achieves her independence or welcomes the complete downfall of her tyrant. To-day Spain is drawing the life-blood from her too willing subject and making more glaring her long practiced crimes. As regards the final destiny of Cuba, that question will be settled by certain economic laws which are as sure in their operations as are those of gravitation.

It is with reluctance that the temporary sojourner in Cuba leaves her pleasant shores. A brief residence at Havana passes like a mid-summer night's dream, while the memories one brings away seems like delusive spots of the imagination: smiling skies and smiling waters; groves of palms and oranges; the bloom of the heliotrope, the jasmine and the rose; flights of strange birds; tropic nights luxurious and calm; picturesque groupes of natives—negroes, coolies and Monteros; graceful figures of dark-eyed señoritas in rich draperies, undulating volantes, military pageants, church processions, frowning fortresses, grim batteries, white sails and sparkling fountains; these mingle and make the brilliant picture one sees at a glimpse and retains always.

If it were only possible to have this view of the natural blessings that have been so bountifully lavished upon this island, and to be able to shut out all that man has done and is doing to mar these, and closing ones eyes on the many forms of human misery that assail them on every hand, then a visit to or a residence in Cuba would be as full of pleasure as poet's dream. But one alive to the social and political aspects of life notes the glaring evils that present themselves at every step. He cannot help contrasting the political condition of the people with that of his own country. The existence, almost under the shadow of the flag of the freest institutions the world ever knew, of a government as purely despotic as that of Russia is a fact that must be noted by the indifferent observer. It is a step from the nineteenth century to the dark ages.
Salubrious in climate varied in production, and most fortunately situated for commerce, there must yet be a grand future in store for Cuba. Let us hope the day is not far distant and welcome its dawn.

Sincerely Yours, J. B. BURRIS.
Straightforwardness.
In private, Mr. Cleveland has exploded on occasion with great violence, but he is never personal in his public utterances. All he says in public is calm and well weighed, yet in these sentences from his Jackson-Day address the personal application is inevitable:
We have preached the doctrine that honesty and sincerity should be exacted from political parties. Let us not fall under the condemnation which waits on shifty schemes and insincere professions.
I believe our countrymen are prepared to act on principle, and are in no mood for political maneuvering.
They will not waste time in studying conundrums, guessing riddles or trying to interpret doubtful phrases.
They demand a plain and simple statement of political purpose.
Every line of this is freighted with the contempt of the honest man feeling for the little political trickster.
Every word of it cuts like a knife, and as it constitutes and as it up that whole, brief as it is, it constitutes appeal as strong as could be made to the highest qualities of citizenship, and the strongest instincts of courageous manhood.
At times Mr. Cleveland is highly exasperating to nearly all Democrats His individuality is so strong that where his perception happens to be blunt he creates among those who best know his admirable qualities strong feeling that he needs discipli-ning. But he is always liable to give utterance to some such expression as this, so full of the instincts of Democracy; so strong in its symbolism with all that is strongest and best in the Democratic mind that it raises him higher than ever in the esteem of Democrats, as it brings the earnestness of his nature and the honesty of his purposes into high relief against the background of futile scheming and petty, ineffectual trickery of the little men whom war-politics have lifted into temporary notoriety.

Whatever else he is, he is always straightforward, and there is nothing in any man in public life which so commands him to the people, which gives them such enduring confidence in him as straightforwardness. It was that in Andrew Jackson which made all Democrats "swear by him" at all times when they were so exasperated with him as to wish to break his neck—as very often they had ample occasion to be, since there never was a man more obstinately wrong-headed when he was wrong than Andrew Jackson. But when the people compared him to such little tricksters as Van Buren they saw the difference and could not help loving Jackson for it. Nor can they help loving Cleveland all the more that he is enough like Jackson to despise the little whippersnapper politicians of New York who think they can be Van Burens now.

Mr. Cleveland was never more essentially right in his life than in these sentences. For what every man with the Democratic instinct in him demands in public politics and public men is straightforwardness.—Replic.

There are three postulates, viz., the being of God, our accountability to Him and the immortality of the soul, on the certainty of which every other doctrine of religion rests.
In the steeples of every human life hangs a bell, which by and by will begin to toll a solemn knell. The bell rings the years in before it rings us out.

Nearly every one needs a good spring medicine, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is undoubtedly the best. Try it this season.

him higher than ever in the esteem
of Democrats, as it brings the earnestness of his nature and the honesty
of his purposes into high relief
against the background of futile
scheming and petty, ineffectual
trickery of the little men whom war-politics have lifted into temporary notoriety.

Whatever else he is, he is always straightforward, and there is nothing
in any man in public life which so
commands him to the people, which gives them such enduring confidence
in him as straightforwardness. It was that in Andrew Jackson which made all Democrats "swear by him"
at all times when they were so exasperated with him as to wish to break
his neck—as very often they had
ample occasion to be, since there never was a man more obstinately wrong-
headed when he was wrong than Andrew Jackson. But when the people
compared him to such little tricksters
as Van Buren they saw the difference
and could not help loving Jackson
for it. Nor can they help loving Cleveland all the more that he is enough like Jackson to despise the little whippersnapper politicians of New York who think they can be Van Burens now.

Mr. Cleveland was never more essentially right in his life than in these sentences. For what every man with the Democratic instinct in him
demands in public politics and public men is straightforwardness.—Rep-
lic.

There are three postulates, viz., the being of God, our accountability to Him and the immortality of the soul, on the certainty
of which every other doctrine of religion rests.
In the steeples of every human life hangs a bell, which by and by will begin to toll a solemn knell. The bell rings the years in before it rings us out.

Nearly every one needs a good spring medicine, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is undoubtedly the best. Try it this season.

A DARING THIEF.

His Bold Attempt to Rob a Central Hudson Express Car.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Feb. 22.—A man calling himself William Cross attempted to rob the American express car on the New York Central road between this city and Syracuse Saturday night. He shot Express Messenger McInerney and proceeded to ransack the packages when the trainmen discovered him. He shot at them and at Lyons he jumped on an engine, shooting as he went.
After a hot chase he left the engine and forced a farmer to give him a horse. He was finally captured in a swamp and taken to Lyons jail. Mc-Inerney was not seriously hurt.

Boundary Line Dispute.

BENSON, A. T., Feb. 22.—The announcement is made by a prominent Mexican official of Sonora that the new survey of the international boundary line between Mexico and the United States will throw at least 40 miles of American territory under Mexican jurisdiction. Such a result would include the towns of Nogales, Tombstone, Tucson, Wilcox, Benson, Gila Bend and Yuma in Arizona, and San Diego, Cal., besides the entire line of the Southern Pacific in Arizona.

Large Fire in Cape Town.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—A dispatch from Cape Town, South Africa, states that a fire broke out there Monday which completely gutted a large block of buildings in which were located the masonic temple, a theater and the government office of native affairs. Among the heavy losers is Mrs. James Brown Potter, the American actress. All the scenery used in her plays and all her company's wardrobes were burned.
All the archives in the office of native affairs were consumed.

Shot by Her Maniac Husband.

WEST POINT, Neb., Feb. 22.—Henry Pfingling, a wealthy farmer of Cuming county, Sunday night shot and instantly killed his wife. Pfingling was adjudged insane last September, but escaped from jail in December, remaining at large ever since. Sunday night he came home unawares and finding his wife in the kitchen deliberately fired a bullet into her brain.

Four Thousand Rabbit Skins Taken.

TRAVEL, Cal., Feb. 22.—The largest rabbit drive ever held in this section was held Sunday about 2 miles west of this place. Hunters, vehicles and 400 mounted horsemen commenced the line of march, which extended 4 miles in width. Great excitement prevailed upon reaching the wings of the corral, which were 15 miles apart.
About 4,000 scalps were secured.

Animals on Farms.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—A report from the agricultural department shows that horses on farms and ranches in the United States January 1, 1892, numbered 15,498,140; milch cows were estimated at 16,416,351 and other cattle at 37,551,239. The number of sheep is said to be 52,398,019. Aggregate value of all, $2,461,755,678, or $132,000,000 more than 1891.

Waters Cast Up Their Dead.

ALTON, Ill., Feb. 23.—The body found floating in a skiff was decided by a jury to be that of a man found dead in a small boat near that point a year ago and buried in his boat in lieu of a coffin.
The body was buried on the shore and is supposed to have been dislodged by the ice and high water. It was again interred near the point where discovered.

Statue to Brigham Young.

SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., Feb. 23.—It has been decided that Brigham Young is to have a statue erected to his honor in this city. The general idea of the work was taken from the Gambetta monument recently erected in Paris and is to make not simply a statue of President Young but also a memorial to the pioneers. It will cost $50,000.

Harry Gilbert, the Aeronaut, Dead.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—Prof. Harry Gilbert, the widely known aeronaut, died Friday of heart failure at his home in Brooklyn. Mr. Gilbert, who was the hero of many hairbreadth escapes, was 54 years old. He was well known as the name of Henry Denier.

Chair Candidate.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 22.—Ex-cause clothing and food are things Senator Henry W. Blair, then counted as an advocate tariff drives directly at the tool-box of the mechanic, the pantry and clothes chest of the laborer, and exports from them their largest taxes.

ALL FOR HILL.

New York Democrats Hold a State Convention.

The Delegates Are Instructed to Vote for Hill in the National Convention—Objectors Call Another Meeting.

NEW YORK DEMOCRATS.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 23.—Chairman Murphy, of the state committee, called the democratic state convention to order yesterday and without formally introducing Judge George M. Beebe as temporary chairman, who made a short speech. Gen. Sickles was made permanent chairman. The platform adopted "pledges the fidelity of the democratic party tariff reform and to the whole democratic faith and tradition, as affirmed in national platforms from 1876 to 1888, as well as in our state platforms; denounces the Sherman silver law, the McKinley tariff, the Blaine reciprocity humbug, the squandered surplus, the advancing deficit, the defective census and falsified representation and the revolutionary procedures of the billion dollar congress; indorses the state administration of ex-Gov. Hill, and instructs the delegates to vote for him for presidential candidate." Senator Hill made a speech in which he thanked the convention for the honor conferred upon him. The convention at 5-30 p. m. adjourned sine die.

THE OBJECTORS.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 23.—The conference of objectors to the early convention met in Union hall yesterday and issued an address to the democrats of the state in which they declare that primaries had been carried where only two democrats were present; that caucuses had been held in out of the way places so as to annoy the voters, and that 300,000 democratic voters in the state had been totally disfranchised by Hill and his methods. A call was made for a state convention May 31 at Syracuse.

A BIG EXCURSION.

Visit of Congressmen and Other Notables to the World's Fair City.

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—The 300 distinguished Washington guests of Chicago, including congressmen, senators and foreign diplomats, with their wives and daughters, to inspect world's fair progress, have arrived safely and in high spirits in this city.
The four gorgeous trains in which they rode pulled into the Grand Central depot, the first at 4 p. m., Saturday and the other three at intervals of fifteen minutes, the Baltimore and Ohio managers having staked and nearly maintained their reputation on the completion of the journey in twenty-four hours.

The prime object of this excursion is to give the members of congress a chance to note the progress in the world's fair enterprise which they authorized in April, 1890. The arrangements were made and the whole trip is being conducted by a committee of citizens who offer the freedom of the city and expect every Chicagoan to make the offer good.

CHICAGO, Feb. 23.—The congressional visitors went to Jackson park yesterday to view the progress made upon the world's fair site and buildings.
Chief of Construction Burnham, by the means of some very comprehensive, newly-completed plans, outlined for the benefit of the visitors the position of the buildings, their cost, the progress still to be made and the uses to which they will be put.
After a complete look at the various buildings lunch was served in the woman's pavilion. Returning to the city, a banquet was given in the evening at the Grand Pacific hotel. The special trains leave for Washington at 8:30 a. m. to-day.

Convicts Who Draw Pensions.

JACKSON, Mich., Feb. 24.—Between twenty-five and thirty prisoners in the penitentiary here receive pensions from the government. Those that let it accrued have snug sums awaiting them when they are released. One prisoner who completed a ten years' sentence recently left the prison doors with $500, the amount saved up from his war pension. The prison officials act as the convicts' bankers, and at the present time have on deposit some $10,000 or $11,000.

First Continental Congress.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—The first continental congress of the national society of Daughters of the American Revolution convened in this city yesterday.
Mrs. Harrison, president general of the national society, delivered the address of welcome. She reviewed the organization of the society in October, 1890, since which time a membership of 1,300 has been gained.

Workmen on Demonstration May 1.

BRUSSELS, Feb. 23.—A large workingmen's congress was held here Sunday for the purpose of discussing the best means to compel parliament to grant universal suffrage. It was resolved to organize an enormous demonstration for May 1. Hundreds of thousands of workmen are demanding universal suffrage.

Died at the Age of 108.

GREEN BAY, Wis., Feb. 23.—Mrs.
Angeline Martin, aged 108 years, and probably the oldest woman in the state of Wisconsin, died of old age and grip here last Friday. She was born in 1784.

A Rich Strike.

TELLURIDE, Col., Feb. 24.—One of the largest silver strikes known in Colorado for years was made Tuesday in "Last Dollar" mine. The ore, it is said, runs $40,000 to the ton.

Children Cremated.

IRONWOOD, Mich., Feb. 23.—Three young children of Charles De Longchamp were burned to death in their home here, by the explosion of a kerosene lamp.

Illinois Democrats.

CHICAGO, Feb. 23.—The democratic state central committee met here and decided to hold the state convention at Springfield April 27.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, causing distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet efficiently.
It tones the stomach, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, banishes headache, and refreshes the mind.

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. After eating I would have a faint or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble was aggravated by my business, painting. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which did me an amazing amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced."

TERRIBLE ITCHING

Used Everything Five Months. In Three Weeks not a Scar or Pimple.
Cured by Cuticura.

When my baby was three months old his cheeks and forehead began to break out with white pimples on red surface. In a few days itching commenced, which was terrible. After he would rub it, mother would oze from the points. In a short time it spread over the top of his head, then down his neck, and all over his face. We used everything we could hear of for nearly five months. It grew worse all the time. I saw your advertisement of the CUTICURA REMEDIES in the "Chicago Record". We purchased CUTICURA REMEDIES and commenced their use. In three weeks' time there was not a sore or pimple on even a scar, on head or face. He is nineteen months old now, and has no signs of the disease. His scalp is healthy and he has a beautiful head of hair.
(See portrait herewith.)

My infant, eighteen months old, was afflicted with skin eruptions on his limbs. Sores came on other parts. All remedies failed until I procured

HOUSEHOLD SHOULD BE WITHOUT

CRANKS AT THE CAPITAL.

Government Officials Beset by Crazy Claimants.

An Annoying Class of People Who Seem to Be Attracted Toward Those Who Hold Political Places.

The recent developments in insanity remind me of our experiences in Washington, said a lady whose husband has, through two administrations, held a high office in the government. "Why men in official places," she continued, "are not one and all victims of crazy malevolence is a wonder. Cranks and lunatics of all kinds seem to be particularly attracted toward those who hold political places. As a rule, their mania chiefly consists in writing letters innumerable on every subject under the sun to the heads of the departments. This, of course, is simply annoying, but sometimes it takes a most serious form. Insane claimants come to Washington by the hundreds with preposterous demands of every kind. Of course, at the departments and in their houses the president and his cabinet are guarded as far as may be from these intruders; but they sometimes gain access to the people they desire to see, and give a great deal of trouble.

"Owing, probably, to my name having been more or less in the newspapers, I had not a little annoyance from these people myself, and women as well as men used to deluge me with the most absurd applications. One very funny incident, which, however, was most annoying at the time, occurred after we had been in Washington only a short time and before I had warned my servants against these eccentric gentry. We had had a big dinner, and I was alone in the drawing-room about eleven o'clock, just after our guests had departed. I heard a little bustle in the hall, but, fancying it was some one going away, did not disturb myself about it. Presently the door opened and the footman announced 'Miss Clark,' and, quite as if she was an expected guest, in walked a very lady-like looking woman, who calmly informed me that she had a claim against the treasury department for one million dollars, and that she had come to stay with us until she had arranged matters satisfactorily. 'I have brought my trunk,' she explained, very composedly, 'as I suppose I may have to stop with you for some time.' And to my consternation I found that the cabman (for she had arrived in a carriage) had brought her box into the hall and that she had paid and dismissed him. Her whole demeanor was so quiet and assured that the servant who opened the door never dreamed but that she was expected. To have a crazy woman in your house at midnight is not a pleasant position, I assure you; I felt that she must be humored, and, making some excuse, hastily sought my husband and acquainted him with the situation. Fortunately Dr. —, our good neighbor, lived within a few doors, and, writing him a line to ask his advice and assistance, we entertained our strange visitor until he arrived with a carriage to take the poor lady to a safe shelter for the night. With great tact he persuaded her to go with him, and she took leave of us with many apologies for her short stay and abrupt departure.

"My next experience was more serious. My daughter was to be married, and on the afternoon before the wedding I had gone up to my room for a little rest when I was disturbed by one of the servants, who informed me that a gentleman was downstairs who insisted upon seeing 'Miss Mary' (my daughter) or myself. 'He wouldn't give his message, ma'am,' exclaimed the man, 'although I told him that you did not wish to be disturbed.' Thinking that it might be something of importance I went down to the reception room, where I found a tall, very good-looking man, who in an agitated manner told me that he had long loved my Mary, had seen her marriage spoken of in the papers, and had traveled night and day from his home in the west to be in time to prevent such a sacrifice. He insisted upon seeing my daughter at once. He was so excited that I was terribly frightened, but kept my presence of mind, and contrived to ring for the footman. 'Show this gentleman out,' I said, and fairly flew upstairs. Some way or other they got rid of him, but that evening he returned, and again the next morning. Of course he was not admitted, but I was made so thoroughly nervous that my husband sent for a couple of policemen in citizen's clothes, who remained with the wedding party until the young couple were fairly off on the train.

Manning's Brooming.

The late Cardinal Manning was a tall, gaunt man, with a vigorous frame and a large head that was almost completely bald. He had a face that bore the impress of old Roman firmness, and he looked like the picture of a great churchman of old. He was a teetotaler, unlike many of his predecessors, and ate only enough to keep body and mind in a healthy condition. There was absolutely no ostentation about him. When he was made cardinal an influential member of his flock said to him: "I would like to see your eminence riding in something better than that shabby old brougham." "Ah!" replied the prelate, with a twinkle in his eye, "when cardinals went about in fine carriages they generally went to the devil!"

Oriental Luxury.

The late Tewfik Pasha, the Egyptian khedive, lived in typical Oriental luxury, but even then he did not spend one hundredth part of the money which his father, Ismail Pasha, lavished about him. Tewfik had four palaces, all of them very beautiful and ornate, and in each of them he was attended in true royal state. Personally he was a pleasant and agreeable man. He always wore the European dress, a black Prince Albert coat, with striped trousers, but added the Turkish fez. On occasions of ceremony he wore the full uniform of a general of the Egyptian army, with his breast covered with gay decorations.

CRANKS AT THE CAPITAL.

Government Officials Beset by Crazy Claimants.

The recent developments in insanity remind me of our experiences in Washington, said a lady whose husband has, through two administrations, held a high office in the government. "Why men in official places," she continued, "are not one and all victims of crazy malevolence is a wonder. Cranks and lunatics of all kinds seem to be particularly attracted toward those who hold political places. As a rule, their mania chiefly consists in writing letters innumerable on every subject under the sun to the heads of the departments. This, of course, is simply annoying, but sometimes it takes a most serious form. Insane claimants come to Washington by the hundreds with preposterous demands of every kind. Of course, at the departments and in their houses the president and his cabinet are guarded as far as may be from these intruders; but they sometimes gain access to the people they desire to see, and give a great deal of trouble.

"Owing, probably, to my name having been more or less in the newspapers, I had not a little annoyance from these people myself, and women as well as men used to deluge me with the most absurd applications. One very funny incident, which, however, was most annoying at the time, occurred after we had been in Washington only a short time and before I had warned my servants against these eccentric gentry. We had had a big dinner, and I was alone in the drawing-room about eleven o'clock, just after our guests had departed. I heard a little bustle in the hall, but, fancying it was some one going away, did not disturb myself about it. Presently the door opened and the footman announced 'Miss Clark,' and, quite as if she was an expected guest, in walked a very lady-like looking woman, who calmly informed me that she had a claim against the treasury department for one million dollars, and that she had come to stay with us until she had arranged matters satisfactorily. 'I have brought my trunk,' she explained, very composedly, 'as I suppose I may have to stop with you for some time.' And to my consternation I found that the cabman (for she had arrived in a carriage) had brought her box into the hall and that she had paid and dismissed him. Her whole demeanor was so quiet and assured that the servant who opened the door never dreamed but that she was expected. To have a crazy woman in your house at midnight is not a pleasant position, I assure you; I felt that she must be humored, and, making some excuse, hastily sought my husband and acquainted him with the situation. Fortunately Dr. —, our good neighbor, lived within a few doors, and, writing him a line to ask his advice and assistance, we entertained our strange visitor until he arrived with a carriage to take the poor lady to a safe shelter for the night. With great tact he persuaded her to go with him, and she took leave of us with many apologies for her short stay and abrupt departure.

"My next experience was more serious. My daughter was to be married, and on the afternoon before the wedding I had gone up to my room for a little rest when I was disturbed by one of the servants, who informed me that a gentleman was downstairs who insisted upon seeing 'Miss Mary' (my daughter) or myself. 'He wouldn't give his message, ma'am,' exclaimed the man, 'although I told him that you did not wish to be disturbed.' Thinking that it might be something of importance I went down to the reception room, where I found a tall, very good-looking man, who in an agitated manner told me that he had long loved my Mary, had seen her marriage spoken of in the papers, and had traveled night and day from his home in the west to be in time to prevent such a sacrifice. He insisted upon seeing my daughter at once. He was so excited that I was terribly frightened, but kept my presence of mind, and contrived to ring for the footman. 'Show this gentleman out,' I said, and fairly flew upstairs. Some way or other they got rid of him, but that evening he returned, and again the next morning. Of course he was not admitted, but I was made so thoroughly nervous that my husband sent for a couple of policemen in citizen's clothes, who remained with the wedding party until the young couple were fairly off on the train.

Manning's Brooming.

The late Cardinal Manning was a tall, gaunt man, with a vigorous frame and a large head that was almost completely bald. He had a face that bore the impress of old Roman firmness, and he looked like the picture of a great churchman of old. He was a teetotaler, unlike many of his predecessors, and ate only enough to keep body and mind in a healthy condition. There was absolutely no ostentation about him. When he was made cardinal an influential member of his flock said to him: "I would like to see your eminence riding in something better than that shabby old brougham." "Ah!" replied the prelate, with a twinkle in his eye, "when cardinals went about in fine carriages they generally went to the devil!"

Oriental Luxury.

The late Tewfik Pasha, the Egyptian khedive, lived in typical Oriental luxury, but even then he did not spend one hundredth part of the money which his father, Ismail Pasha, lavished about him. Tewfik had four palaces, all of them very beautiful and ornate, and in each of them he was attended in true royal state. Personally he was a pleasant and agreeable man. He always wore the European dress, a black Prince Albert coat, with striped trousers, but added the Turkish fez. On occasions of ceremony he wore the full uniform of a general of the Egyptian army, with his breast covered with gay decorations.

A JEALOUS LION.

The Terrible Revenge of the Savage Brute.

Becoming Enraged Over a Division of Affection He Tears the Bride of His Master to Pieces During His Absence.

A most peculiar instance of jealousy in animals was lately reported from a ranch up in the range northwest of Silver City, N. M.

A Mexican named Juan Lopez some years ago caught a young mountain lion and raised it as a pet. He had the animal completely under subjection, and it was as docile with him as a house cat. The lion is now about four years old and full grown, but it has always been accustomed to sleep at the foot of the bed of his master, and has followed him like a dog when he went around the place. He had it trained for hunting, and it was always with him except when he came to town. It had never shown any evil disposition when with other people and would allow every visitor to fondle and pet it.

Lopez recently fell a victim to the charms of one of the señoritas. The girl was brought home to the cabin of Lopez, and her first move was to insist that the lion should be made to sleep out of the house, as she was afraid of the big animal. Lopez assented to her wishes and built a house for his pet near the door of the cabin. When he attempted to make the animal go in it that night the brute for the first time was disposed to rebel against the wishes of its master, and the result was that it received a whipping. It went sullenly into the box, but all night the Mexican and his bride could hear its low growls. Next morning the animal slunk into the house and curled up in a corner, repulsing the caresses of its master.

It was sullen all day, but the bride noticed that it watched her constantly, and she became so nervous that she insisted that her husband should get rid of the big lion. He promised to do so as soon as possible. He told her that he would take it to town in a few days and sell it. The second night it went to its hut outside with little opposition, and next morning Lopez started to town to find a purchaser for his pet. He left the animal at home and told his wife to pay no attention to it but go about her work as if it was not in the house.

Lopez had no difficulty in finding a purchaser for his lion and about five o'clock in the evening started home pretty well intoxicated with mecal, and later at the fact that he was to get one hundred pesos for his pet, which he has estimated to be only worth twenty-five. He arrived home after dark and was surprised to see no light as he approached the house, as he supposed that his wife would be ready with supper for him.

He entered the place, but it was so dark that he could distinguish nothing, and as he groped about he stumbled over something on the floor which gave to his pressure. Stooping down, he discovered that the object was a woman's body and he felt that the blood had flowed over the floor in such quantities that the place seemed to be literally saturated. He quickly struck a light and was horrified at the sight that met his gaze.

The young wife had been torn to pieces by the savage brute, which had evidently looked upon her as the cause of its disgrace. The struggle could not have been long, as the marks of the teeth showed that the lion had jumped upon her back and broken her neck at the first bite. It had then torn the victim to shreds, the limbs being severed from the body and the floor covered with bleeding remnants, which had been dragged about and shaken as a cat treats a rat. Part of the breast had been torn away and eaten and the face so disfigured that it was unrecognizable.

The animal after completing its bloody work had fled to the mountains and has not since been seen. Lopez hurried to the nearest neighbor and the terrible story soon spread.

The young husband refused to be comforted. His grief was so great that finally he became violently insane and had to be confined to prevent him from taking his life.

A Strange Affliction.

A French journal describes the case of a woman twenty-one years of age but whose physiognomy is that of a woman fully seventy years old. The appearance of the young woman is so deceiving that her father, who is fifty years old, has frequently been asked if she were not his mother. The surface of the skin is the only part affected. The doctors describe it as a decrepitude of the cutaneous system. Beyond this the young lady has nothing odd appearing about her. Her hair is blonde and of ordinary length and her memory, judgment and intelligence very good. Drs. Charcot and Souques, under whose observation the case was studied, state that the wrinkling of the girl's skin began when she was about eleven years old. Up to that time she had been a vivacious and happy child, ranking well in her studies at school. The wrinkling was so rapid that her friends were unable to recognize her after a period of two weeks, unless they had seen her in the interval. Dr. Charcot states that the skin, during the early stages of the change, resembled the scales of a fish. Every possible means have been tried to improve the young lady's condition, but they have all proved unavailing.

Soap That Wouldn't Lather.

The Norwegians make of goat's milk a brown cheese called "mysoot," which does not look very inviting to a foreigner. It is made in the shape of little bricks. A native, Dr. Julius Nicholson, was sending some Norwegian delicacies to a friend in Germany and among others he put in a piece of mysoot. His friend wrote and thanked him for the salmon, etc., and then continued: "The soap is very nice, but we find great difficulty in making the lather." This was the cheese!

THE EMPEROR OF ETHIOPIA.

An Enlightened Prince Who Can Work and Who Prays Two Hours Daily.

Count Pietro Antonelli, a member of the Italian parliament, who has spent several years in Ethiopia and has been sent many times as Italian ambassador to Emperor Menelik, has given an interesting account of that monarch in a recent issue of the Riforma di Rome, says the New York Tribune.

Menelik, says the count, who was married to the Princess Taitu in 1883, is now forty-eight years old. He is a man of medium height and powerful body, with dark-brown skin and coarse although not irregular features. He is not naturally cruel and the signing of death-warrants often makes him sorrowful and reflective. He understands his people and is able to gain their love and rule them wisely.

Although he now bears the title of emperor of Ethiopia, commands an army of one hundred and thirty thousand men with sixty thousand guns and displays at times oriental splendor, he is not ashamed to subject himself to physical labor. He saws wood, makes house models and superintends the construction of buildings. A short time ago a terrible disease carried away many of the oxen, and Menelik and his courtiers used rakes and spades in order to prepare the fields for the reception of the seed.

He worked also three months as a stone-mason on a church which he ordered built not long ago. He understands the main facts about railroads and steamships and the principles of telegraphy. He would gladly acquaint his people with the technical advances in science and the arts, but his advisers will not consent to it.

Since the early '80's, adds the count, Menelik has kept up his connection with Europe. In mercantile affairs he is the equal of experienced tradesmen. In diplomatic matters he well understands the art of prolonging the discussion until he has reached a decision. One who has to carry on business with him must be observant and attentive. The emperor takes great interest in European newspapers. He is fond of talking with Europeans, also, in order to increase his knowledge of Europe. He always receives Europeans in a friendly and flattering manner.

As a rule the emperor breaks his night's rest at three o'clock in the morning. He prays then for two hours. From five o'clock till seven he dictates letters to his secretaries. At seven o'clock he receives his ministers and visitors of importance and listens to their reports of the state of the empire. He gives his orders for the day after the reports and makes his appointments. During the day he also finds time to regulate watches, draw architectural plans, give medicine to the sick and take care of his army.

AN ARCHDUKE'S COLONY.

His Efforts to Lead the Gypsies to the Ways of Civilization.

Archduke Joseph of Austria is little less eccentric in his tastes than the Archduke Johann, who married a chorus girl and became a sea captain, or the Archduke Heinrich, who sacrificed his royal honors to wed an opera singer. The Archduke Joseph's inclination, however, turns him to gypsies rather than to actresses, and his writings on gypsy traditions, gypsy music and gypsy customs have secured for him a high place in the folk-lore literature of the checkered Austro-Hungarian empire.

The archduke's latest manifestation of his peculiar fondness for gypsies is an attempt to domesticate them, says the New York Sun. He got permission from Emperor Franz Joseph to form gypsy colonies, and to try to teach them the arts of agriculture and industry, and then built sixty little cottages for as many families on his Alesuth estate in Hungary. About two weeks ago he corralled a gypsy caravan and led it to his uninhabited village. He chose a strapping fellow of twenty-five for chief, or mayor, and had married to him by the pastor of Alesuth the prettiest girl in the caravan. The archduke himself gave the girl away, and a friend was the best man. In the subsequent festivities the archduke appeared in the full attire of a gypsy chieftain, and, according to custom, as the man who gave the bride away, led the wedding procession with a wreath of flowers on his head and a bamboo stick wrapped with gray cloth in his hand.

Each family in the new village has a cow and a pony and a quarter of an acre of ground. The archduke is about to erect a factory near the village, at which all who are not thrifty enough to support themselves without day labor may find employment. Should the colony prove a success other caravans are to be captured by the archduke and located in similar surroundings. His purpose is to lead into ways of comfort and civilization the great horde of wandering folk who pass all their time in migrating in picturesque caravans from one end of the Austro-Hungarian empire to the other.

An Accidental Reunion.

For some time a young woman from Sweden had been looking for her sister, of whose whereabouts she knew nothing except that she was somewhere in the United States. Finally, the other day, she drifted to Portland, Me., and inquiring for this sister mentioned a name that sounded a little like Swift. So she was taken to the store of Mr. Swift in that town, who, however, proved to be entirely ignorant of the girl's whereabouts. But while she was telling her story a man happened to be in the store who said he had a Swedish servant girl who might possibly be able to help the inquirer. The denouement was quite dramatic, for the servant girl proved to be the long-lost sister.

THE HERMIT OF THE HOOK.

A Queer Existence Is That of the Sandy Hook Telegraph Operator.

The loneliest and at the same time one of the healthiest jobs within some distance of this town is that of the man who reports the incoming and outgoing vessels for the Western Union down at Sandy Hook, says the New York Advertiser. The life led by St. Simeon Stylites on top of his solitary pillar was quite exciting compared to it. When the Western Union man isn't sleeping he is up in a little room at the top of a six-story wooden tower, reached by several breath-taking, corkscrew flights of stairs, where he spends his time in clapping a glass to his weather eye and scouring the horizon in the correct sea-dog fashion.

Every craft that belongs to or touches at this port is known to him, and when an occasional stranger shows up he soon learns her identity from the stack of yacht manuals and shipping registers that fill one corner of his den. A telegraph instrument clicks incessantly upon his desk, and with it he flashes the name of every vessel that passes the Hook, either inward or outward bound, up to town. From three sides of his wind-shaken perch he looks upon the briny; from the fourth the Hook, with its desolate pines and dreary wastes is visible. The government proving station and the big, unfinished granite walls of the abandoned fort lie almost at the foot of the tower and break the monotonous vista.

In the winter the life of the Western Union man is marked by a depressing sameness; incoming ships, outgoing ships, the incessant snarling of the vicious ocean winds without, and now and then a storm.

The summer, though, is a dream of delight. Salt breezes while the rest of the world is sweltering, regatta after regatta bringing long processions of natty yachts before his windows, and at times the roar of the great guns on the proving grounds to create a passing excitement.

While on duty the telegraph man's only connection with the world below him is by means of a tin bucket that runs along a slanting wire rope to the ground. His meals come up to him in this way, and the clatter of the bucket as it grates along the wire is one of the few sounds that break the silence which surrounds him.

NO DUEL IN HIS.

A Hungarian Chief of Police Declines a Baron's Request for Gore.

A sensation has been caused in Hungarian military circles by the attempt of a prominent military man to induce the chief of police of Keeskemet, a town fifty miles southeast of this city, to fight a duel, says the Buda-Pesth Dispatch.

It appears that Baron Matencloft, a lieutenant in the hussars, became involved in a quarrel with the chief of police, when language was used which the baron considered insulting to his dignity. He therefore prepared a challenge to fight a duel, which he forwarded to the chief of police. This missive was followed closely by friends of the baron, who were to act as his seconds, and who visited the chief of police to arrange the preliminary details of the fight, they of course expecting to meet the seconds whom they naturally thought the chief would have selected to act for him. The baron's seconds were received in a manner not laid down in the code. The chief of police very evidently had no desire to violate the laws which he was paid to uphold, and in stating this fact to the baron's representatives he did not stop to pick his words, but told them so plainly what he thought of them and their principal that they withdrew highly indignant at the insults the chief of police had heaped upon them. The police official, not content with having made his opinion on the subject of dueling perfectly clear to the baron and his seconds, issued a warrant for the arrest of Baron Matencloft for sending a challenge, such action being a violation of the law. This fact came to the ears of the baron, and upon learning of it he lost all desire to meet the chief of police, either upon the field of honor or in a police court. He therefore retired to the sanctuary afforded by the military barracks, where, according to the military law, the police have no authority.

A GIRL WHO CAN SHOOT.

Her Unerring Aim Saved Her Father from a Terrible Death.

"In my recent trip to New Mexico in the interests of the Omaha stock exchange I witnessed an act of heroism that I shall never forget," said W. F. Skinner to an Omaha Bee man. "The central figure was a beautiful and refined young lady, the daughter of a banker who owns extensive cattle ranches in northern New Mexico. During the vacations she had passed on the ranch she had acquired a wonderful proficiency with the rifle, and could shoot with the accuracy of an old ranchman. One day we were startled by seeing a cinnamon bear, and a large one at that, near the edge of a gully but a short distance from the house. Both father and daughter rushed for their rifles and made for the ravine. The wild beast was on the opposite side and unable to get at us. The banker in his excitement got too close to the edge of the ravine and tumbled in, falling a distance of twelve or fifteen feet. He lay stunned by the force of the fall, and we feared he had been seriously hurt. In another second down tumbled bruin into the gully, whether intentionally or accidentally I don't know. But the awful danger of my host immediately flashed upon me. He was too stunned to help himself, and the savage beast, infuriated by the pain of his fall, rushed toward the prostrate man. I was frozen with horror. In a twinkling I heard the report of a rifle at my side, saw a puff of smoke, and the bear dropped dead almost on the helpless form of the banker. I turned and saw my fair companion just dropping her rifle from her shoulder. Her face was pale, but her eyes lit up with a look of mingled joy and triumph. She had saved her father from a terrible death by her presence of mind and unerring aim."

Oriental Luxury.

The late Tewfik Pasha, the Egyptian khedive, lived in typical Oriental luxury, but even then he did not spend one hundredth part of the money which his father, Ismail Pasha, lavished about him. Tewfik had four palaces, all of them very beautiful and ornate, and in each of them he was attended in true royal state. Personally he was a pleasant and agreeable man. His ways were the European dress, a blue Prince Albert coat, with striped trousers, but added the Turkish fez. On occasions of ceremony he wore the full uniform of a general of the Egyptian army, with his breast covered with decorations.

them that brings the writer before one's eyes. Sometimes the words line run up the page and sometimes straggle down, but they always flow and illustrate the bent of writer's mind and if one has to puzzle awhile over illegible word or two it only makes pleasure of reading the letter the longer. Who living ever tied up a pile of typewritten letters with a ribbon and treasured them for years? And not the most blindly adoring ever filled her ribbon drawer with things clicked off on the noisy little machine. Howells says: "The man of future will not know how to write with typewriter." If that be true, the woman of the future won't keep letters.

Asia means morning or east; Europe, evening or west; Australia means ly to or in the south. Hence, we consider that these names mean eastern land, western land and southern land. Asia is a Greek word, Europe is a Hebrew oreb, Australia is a Latin word. The origin of the word "Africa" is uncertain. Some conjecture that it is a Semitic word, meaning "Land of Wanderers."

A Russian journal reports an interesting case of a philanthropic physician. Visiting the patients of his district, the doctor found that in many instances their sickness was caused by hunger. To the most needy he prescribed pounds of pure rye flour in doses of pounds a day." He ordered his patient to get the medicine at the doctor's of the nearest village, where it would be issued free of charge every day. The good doctor made arrangements with the druggist to supply flour at his expense. In this way patients will be kept from starving the whole winter.

Died Suddenly.

Levi Whitted, of Carpentersville, became dizzy while riding on a load of wood last Saturday, which he was taking home, and fell to the ground. One of the wheels of the wagon struck his head and almost completely scalped him. He was taken to his home and cared for, but he never recovered from the shock, dying on Sunday morning. The deceased was 65 years of age, and was one of the old residents of this county. He leaves a widow and several adult children.

Der Freischutz.

At Music Hall, on Friday and Saturday evenings, under the direction of Prof. Alma Dahl, a number of the students of the School of Music rendered scenes from that brilliant composition, "Der Freischutz." On Friday evening the cast was made up of Misses Della Ogden and Carrie Jordan and Messrs. Lockwood and Rous, with a chorus of young ladies led by Miss Vandike. On Saturday evening the chorus was the same and the cast consisted of Misses Pauline Blake Myrtle Grubb, and Messrs. Walter Howe Jones and Fred Rous. The renditions were most happy both evenings, notwithstanding the lack of stage, scenery, costuming, etc., and the young ladies and gentlemen acquitted themselves most creditably. The change of scenery from a forest to an interior, without an intervening curtain, was interesting as it was unique; taken all in all, Miss Dahl should feel complimented on the success of the entertainment.

Protection Powwow.

On Saturday, at the Court House, a powwow of Republicans was held—we say powwow advisedly, for there were not a sufficient number of the brethren present to entitle it to the name of a convention. Brother Tom presided and talked—the first with grace, and the latter naturally, as of yore, on all occasions, and when his wind was spent the other Brothers were equal to the emergency, rather than that silence should reign. In the meantime, however, Messrs. Birch, Denny, Case and Lockridge got in a word edgewise, without flourish, and no encores were allowed.

A committee consisting of Messrs. Denny, Hanna, Leonard and Moore was appointed to gerrymander the county for delegate purposes, and the report submitted demonstrated the work of experts. The out-townships were treated somewhat as the novices are treated by an old-timer in a game of taste or smell seven-up, in which red liquor is the stake, and the bottle containing it is placed in the center of the players' table. The winner of the game tastes the drink and the defeated smell the bottle. For the district convention each of the townships got a delegate, and seven delegates at large were chosen, Greencastle getting a cinch on the big share of the seven. For the State convention fourteen delegates were allowed and Greencastle took five of them.

The federal officials hereabouts had the boys well trained, and no one without the Harrison brand was in the delegate swim.

The delegates were instructed to use their votes and influence to secure the election of Hon. S. A. Hays as a delegate to the National Republican Convention at Minneapolis.

James A. Curtis made a motion recommending and instructing for S. A. Hays for Governor and A. O. Lockridge for Representative in the Legislature, but for some unknown reason Brother Tom treated the motion with silence most profound, and something of "dull, sickening thud," sort struck the brethren.

Soon they rallied, however, and called for Hays, not he of the post-office, but he of the State Senate. Silas came forward, and he was not unprepared. He was so full of words that they began to roll out and rebound before he had fairly gotten to the front. His effort, as he progressed, convinced all hearers that he was filled with embryo cyclones tainted with Republican-Protection-Harrisonianism, and that it was a work of charity to allow him to work them off. He said he appreciated a compliment coming from Republicans because Republicans were the best people in the world, and the Putnam county Republicans were the best of all Republicans. He set up a thing of straw which he asserted was the record of the Democratic Legislature and then proceeded to chew it. Silas pleased the brethren, however, and that was his aim and purpose.

Messrs. Birch, Bridges and others followed with short exhortations, and the powwow closed.

NOTES.

There was no hilarity or enthusiasm. The cigar smokers assisted in placing the brethren under a cloud.

When Madison township was called, Levi Woodrum was remembered.

Only a few of the out-townships were represented.

When the loaves and fishes are to be divided amongst Putnam county Republicans Greencastle never fails to secure the big end of the supply.

If no Democrats had been present the attendance would have been a prototype of that oft mentioned potato crop—very small and few in a hill.

The old time Republicans were conspicuous because of their absence.
